

Foundation Indirect Cost Policies

This is a partial list of U.S. private foundations' policies on overhead/indirect cost reimbursement to universities, to the best of our knowledge. We hope that this will assist you in assembling budgets for foundation proposals. Please note that many foundations do not have consistent policies on this issue, and their decisions can even vary from program to program and grant to grant. If you or a faculty member hears something different from a foundation program officer than the information shown here, please let us know, so we can update this list for the campus community, and also so that such timely information can help CMU to maintain a good relationship with that organization. If you have a question about a foundation not on this list, please call us. We intend to update it as needed. As always, we encourage you to call us about any foundation proposal if we can help in any way.

Thank you!

Foundation Relations Team

| Kaufman Foundation, Charles E. (supporting organization of The Pittsburgh Foundation) | Budget components can include – but are not limited to – salaries of postdoctoral researchers and other research staff, stipends for graduate and undergraduate researchers, equipment, supplies, publication costs, and travel to scientific meetings. Indirect costs not to exceed 10% of the budget can be included, but not such as to increase the total size of the award; applicants should discuss this with their Institution. Budget items not supported are tuition or student fees, construction or renovation costs, consultants, or salary for the Principal Investigator. https://kaufman.pittsburghfoundation.org/new-initiative-research |
